Triangle's Transportation Agencies Seek Public Feedback on Goals for Region's Future Transportation System

Deadline is January 10, 2024

TRIANGLE REGION, N.C. – If you're interested in future highway, bicycle, rail, pedestrian, and transit projects for our region over the long-term, now's your chance to give feedback on the goals and objectives that will guide the planning process.

The Durham-Chapel Hill-Carrboro Metropolitan Planning Organization (DCHC MPO) and the Capital Area Metropolitan Planning Organization (CAMPO) are working on Destination 2055, an update to the Triangle Region's long-range transportation plan, the 2055 Metropolitan Transportation Plan (MTP). Destination 2055 will identify future highway, transit, rail, bicycle, pedestrian and other transportation projects for the region over the next 30 years. As the planning process gets underway, it is important for local leaders to understand public perspectives related to the transportation policy goals that will guide future investments.

Background on Destination 2055, the Metropolitan Transportation Plan

The Durham-Chapel Hill-Carrboro Metropolitan Planning Organization (DCHC MPO) and the Capital Area Metropolitan Planning Organization (CAMPO) are working on Destination 2055, an update to the Triangle Region's long-range transportation plan, also known as the 2055 Metropolitan Transportation Plan (MTP). This occurs every four years and will consider all surface transportation modes – driving, bicycling, walking, transit, and freight. The first phase is about understanding what people who live, work, and play in our region want from the transportation network over the next 30 years. This begins with seeking feedback from the community on the previous plan's (2050 MTP) Goals and Objectives. It will take approximately two years to complete the process of drafting and adopting Destination 2055, with initial work beginning in late 2023 and plan adoption anticipated in late 2025. At different points in the process, the public will have opportunities to weigh in on different elements of the plan as they are developed.
